

After our return from Indiana, I participated in a course over the phone on how to communicate with angels. Two sisters, Trudy Griswold and Barbara Mark, creators of www.Angelspeake.com and writers of several books, conducted the course. There were several other people taking the course in a conference call from all over the US and even one lady from the Philippines. Through the course we all became friends and to this day, I still communicate with my angel classmates and I am hoping that while Rick and I are on our travels, I will get to meet them in person.

After the course, I began to communicate with my angels but more importantly; they started to communicate with me! The messages I receive are often very precise and directive but always loving, kind and patient. We are all surrounded by angels and they are there to help us whenever we call upon them. The hardest lesson to learn is to trust what you hear and to be patient when requesting their help. I feel such a sense of peace knowing that I am never alone. To me, angels are messengers here to help us to make our lives easier and bring us closer to our Creator. They are real and once you believe in them, it is amazing how much simpler your life will become.

Now I have started to collect angel jewellery, pins and earrings and it is a rarity to find me without an angel somewhere on my person. I read every book I can find about them and have learned so much. Thank you, Angelspeake!
